History of Zero

vertisers.

'Zero" on the common thermometer, like the fanciful names of the coastellations, is a ourious instance of the way wise men's errors are made immortal by becoming popular. It may be worth while to say that the word itself (zero) comes to us through the Spacish from the Arab'e, and means empty, hence, nothing. In expressions like "90 degrees Fahr.," the abbreviation, Fahr., stands for Fabrenheit, a Prussian merchant of Danizio, on the Baltie sea. His full name was Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit. From a boy he was a close observer of ustuce. and when only ninoteen years old, in the remarkably cold winter of 1709, he exparimented by putting snow and salt together, and noticed that it produced a degree of cold equal to the coldest day of the year. And that day was the coldest day that the oldest inhabitant could remember. Gabriel was the more same with the coincidence of his little sciencific discovery. and hastily concluded that he had found the lowest degree of temperature known in the world, either natural or artificial. He called the degree zaro, and constructed a thermometer, or rade weather glass, with a scale grainating up from zero to boiling point, which he numbered 212, and the freezing point thirtytwo-because, as he thought, mercury contracted the thirty second of its volume on being cooled down from the temperature of freezing water to zero; and expanded 180th on being heated from the freezing to the boiling point.

Time showed that this arrangement instead of being truly scientific, was as arbitrary as the division of the Bible into verses and shapters and that these two points no more represented the real extremes of temperature than "from Dan to Beersheba" expressed the exact extremes of Palestine.

But Fahrenheit's thermometer had been widely adopted with its iconvenient scale; and none thought of any better until his name became an authority, for Fahrenheit finally abandoned trade and gave himself up to science. The three countries which use Fahrenheit are England, Holland and America. Russia and Germany use Raumer's thermometer, in which the boiling point is counted eighty degrees above the freezing point. France uses the contigrade thermometer, so called because it marks the boiling point one hundred degrees from freezing point. On many accounts the centigrade system is the best, and the triumph of convenience will be attained when 23.0 is made the freezing point, and when the bosing point is put 100 or 1,000 degrees from it, and all the sub-divisions are fixed decimally. If Fabranheit had done this at first, or even f he had made it one of his many improvements, after the public adopted his error, the luck of opportunity, which was really his, would have secured to his invention the patronage of the world. DOES THE WORLD MISS ANYONE?-Not long. The best and most useful of us will soon bo forgotten. Those who to day are fi ling a large place in the world's regard will pass away from the remembrance of men in a few months, or at the farthest, in a few years after the grave has closed upon the remains. We are shedding tears over a new made grave and wildly crying out in our gref that our loss is irreparable, yet in a short time the tendrils of love have twined around other supports, and we no longer miss the one who is gone. So passes the world. But there are those to whom a loss is beyond repair. There are men from whose memories no woman's smile can chase recollections of the sweet face that has given up all its beauty at death's icy touch. There are women whose plighted faith extends beyond the grave. and drives away as profuse those who would entice hem from a worship of their buried loves. Such loyalty, however, is hidden away from the public gaze. The world sweeps on beside and around them and cares do not look in upon this unobtreding grief. It carves a line and rears a stone over the dead and hastens away to offer homage to the living .- Proof Sheet. HINTS TO THE CONSUMPTIVE. - The diet of the consumptive, says a writer in an English modical paper, should be simple and nutritious; very strict rules at to special articles are uncalled for, u-less the stomach should have exhibited a gas of imperfect power. Moat should be taken once or twice a day, with a good allowance of fat. Fish is nutritious, especially oysters. Milk is very nourisiting, and two or three pints may be taken in the course of the day. At the hospital for consumption at Bronpton many of the patients have a glass of rum and milk the first thing in the morning before broakfast to help them to dress, and undoubtedly it often does good. Asset milk may be taken when ordinary milk disagraes. Another favorite prescription is fat bacon for breakfast. Sugar is very fattening, and there is no objection to taking it even in consider able quantes. A moderate allowance of wine or spirits is advisable but it shold be taken with cantion when it flushes the face or quickens the pulse—Proof Sheet. pital for consumption at Bronpton many of the
